Hoover Dam Tour

The dam builders came in 1931. A handful of men did the planning and designing of the dam and there were 16,000 workers who brought the design to life. The Nation was struggling under terrible economic times. The Depression was in full swing and jobs were hard to come by. Men came from every part of the country to work at building Hoover Dam. Many had families, wives and children, who came with them. The way of life so many people had to endure -- camping out in tents or shacks along the Colorado River, some for as long as three years, without clean drinking water, toilets, or protection from the extreme weather -- makes these "common" people the real heroes of Hoover Dam. While 96 men were killed while building the dam, several dozen others died from the heat or carbon monoxide poisoning. This does not take into account the hundreds of other people, wives and children of the workers, who perished from heat, polluted water and disease. Join us for a tour of what is commonly referred to as the "Eighth Wonder of the Industrial World". Learn of the construction techniques used, extreme working conditions endured, take a walk down into the tunnels that provide inside access, and be dazzled by the breathtaking views from atop the dam. See why over 1 million a year visit this historic marvel.
